State School Closures:

In the past 10 years two state schools have been closed. Both were closed due to low student enrollments.

The Sunrise State School in Marshfield was closed effective February 1, 2008 due to gradually declining student enrollment. Three students attended this school during the 2006-2007 school year. During the first half of the 2007-2008 school year, only two students were attending this school. One student attended on a full time basis and one attended two days per week. There were more staff than students assigned to this building. The students who did attend this school are now served at Greene Valley State School in Springfield.

At the end of the 1997-98 school year the Waynesville State School was closed. At the time the school closed it had five (5) students.

- One of these students graduated in the Spring of 1998
- Two transferred to B. W. Robinson State School in Rolla and graduated in the Spring of 1999
- One had been attending 67.5% of the time by parent choice and due to medical issues
- Two still attend B.W. Robinson State School in Rolla.

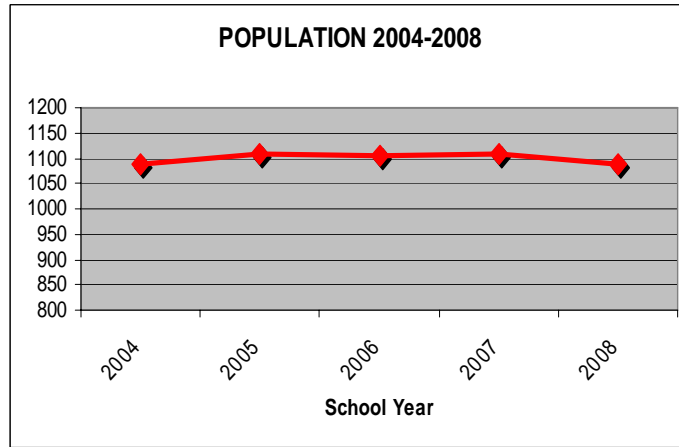

The year prior to closure, Waynesville had eight (8) students.
